Bright Meteor Flashes Over Pennsylvania, Ohio

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A meteor so bright it cast shadows flashing through the sky over western Pennsylvania and Ohio early today, frightening hundreds of persons.

Spokesmen at the Allegheny Observatory and the Buhl Planetarium here said the meteor was of a brightness measured at minus-six magnitude, "the brightest possible."

"It lit up the area like a flashbulb," the spokesman said.

Police reported receiving more than 250 telephone calls within 20 minutes of the meteor's passing.

A spokesman at Lockbourne Air Force Base near Columbus, Ohio, also reported the base received numerous calls.

The Allegheny Observatory said the meteor appeared in the sky at 12:55 a.m.

"The tail was visible for four seconds, and it changed in color from white to blue to orange," the observatory said.

Initial reports indicated the meteor was visible over an area or more than 150 square miles. It moved in a northwesterly direction, from southeast here in Westmoreland County to as far west as Columbus.

Observatory spokesmen said the meteor probably burned up in the earth's atmosphere. They said they received no reports of its striking the earth.

In Ohio, residents in the cities of Warren, Akron, Canton, Columbus, Jackson and Marion reported sighting the bright flash.

New Mexico

CARLSBAD (AP)—National Atmospheric Research officials are searching this southeast New Mexico area for instruments that were lost after being released from a balloon at 135,000 feet altitude over west Texas.

A tracking pilot for the Research Center at Palestine, Tex., Robert Keller, said yesterday the balloon was launched Aug. 7 and the instrument package for atmospheric research was released under a parachute over Midland, Tex., about 150 miles east of here. Keller said a

Obviously taking full advantage of every aspect of technology known to man, including an instant verification of sightings either through telesonelias or their own localized mechanisms.

It is also my opinion that foreign countries technologically advanced are presently and have in the past bombarded us with such sightings such as the ones I am trying to describe now. I have observed the more recent sightings on the boldest and a diversion from moon to local and inhabited satellites as a means of more fruitful concentration.

These are the aims we should be investigating, not publicizing, because we can expect to see them by night while they are practicing.

If so, for sure they expect or intend to use them by day when perfected, and then we won't have the wide data we are observing now. it is certainly ~~the~~^a fact that we can expect more ~~from~~ harm from an enemy than any where else in the sphere, and we have them by the millions. It may be we have more enemies than money.

The picture today is, the enemy fights because he can't afford to, and we fight because we can, it's a matter of who holds out the longest.

In the meantime we're being side tracked by the Chinese, so the Russian can be more diversified, both Communists incidently, and government enemies if it please.

The object described in this inclosed caption was sighted by you exactly 25 Hours later. I was watching for it here at that moment actually expecting a reoccurrence, but obviously the distance was changed.

When I read this article I learnt that I was not totally disappointed, but certain of my visual experience and attitudes.

Thank you folks for this opportunity to express what I truthfully believe & really know.

P.S. if the dates dont jive, The two similar sightings were definitely 25 Hours apart. No exception. This extra hour may be very helpful in determining the speed of retro and disintegration. It seems to me you were short of a crash touch down.!!? Check your atmospheric conditions precisely that date, it may also prove itself invaluable to you amongst others.

My initial report was made to the 751st Radar Squadron Mt. Laguna Calif phone 442-8088 exactly 25 $\frac{1}{2}$ hrs, after my sighting, Im ~~#~~ hopefull they have it logged for your info. a total of 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ hours before your sighting there.
